Footnotes

SPEIGHTSCITY was pulled off A SINGLE MAN after breaking outward slightly at the start, was placed under a snug hold and ranged up towards the pacesetter three wide around the first turn, prompted that opponent with nearly a lane separating the twosome down the backstretch, made his challenge when ready coming to the seven-sixteenths pole, turned for home and got called upon, with the runner up moving up menacingly from the inside at this point, lengthened away during the ensuing furlong, drifting outward despite right handed pressure being applied by the rider to counteract it, drew off decisively, but somewhat deceptively, in the last eighth with the others by now starting to stagger to the wire. RACONTEUR tracked the front runners from the inside, lightly coaxed along to maintain interest, left the premises coming to the seven-sixteenths pole to steer around the tiring former pacesetter, went by and tucked back to the rail by the five-sixteenths pole, cut the corner under urging to sit placed just off the leader's hind quarters for the beginning of the stretch run, failed to keep pace with the errant winner, began to show the effects of his earlier efforts coming to midstretch, lost contact with the top one rapidly, but held on to the place. POLITICALLYCORRECT away alertly, was put to strong hold on the reins and after being a forward factor in the early stages, got dragged back into midpack, was released from that grip and given some rein at the half mile pole, advanced towards the front runners, made an abbreviated challenge at the quarter pole, proved no match and got out finished for the place. A SINGLE MAN got off awkwardly, after giving the gate a left hip check, sat well reserved along the outside at the rear of the pack, was put to encouragement nearing the five-sixteenths pole, but had no response. WHY BROADWAY under the whip leaving the starting gate, was conceded the lead by a hard held POLITICALLYCORRECT, showed the way from the inside, pressed by the top one, had no answer when that opponent made his move early on the far turn, retreated, then was put to a protective hold for the final furlong. MAORI ducked in at the start, faded off a ground-saving journey, was placed under a protective hold coming to the three-sixteenths pole and eased to the end.
